It's wonderful to have a relaxing bath in mineral water while looking out over beautiful scenery. If you live in the US or are planning a visit, consider going to one of the two natural hot springs(温泉) in the western US:

Travertine Hot Springs

At the edge of the Sierra Nevada Mountains near Bridgeport, California lie the Travertine Hot Springs. The orange, green, and red rocks and the mountains create beautiful views for you to enjoy while you bathe. Each pool is a different temperature, so you can find one that's comfortable for you. These springs can easily be reached by car. Take Route 395 south from Bridgeport and turn left onto Jack Sawyer Road. In about a mile you'll arrive at the springs. If you like to camp, you can camp along Jack Sawyer Road.

Bagby Hot Springs

In the middle of an ancient forest you'll find the Bagby Hot Springs. At the springs there are wooden bathhouses, with both private baths and communal baths. Through a system of pipes the spring water is brought to the baths at a temperature of 136 degrees Fahrenheit. If that's too hot, buckets of cold water are also available to mix into the bathtub(浴缸) or to cool off with after your bath.

The Bagby Springs are about 45 minutes from Estacada, Oregon, on Highway 224. To get to the bathhouse there is a 1.5-mile walk from the parking lot through the beautiful Mt. Hood National Forest. While in the area, make sure to visit Portland, which is known for its coffee, restaurants, and music.

Adrian's "Amazing Race" started early when his parents realized that he, as a baby, couldn't hear a thing, not even loud noises. In a special school for the hearing-impaired(听觉受损的), he learned sign language and got to mix with other disabled children. However, the sight of all the disabled children communicating with one another upset his mother. She wanted him to lead a normal life. So after speaking to an advisor, she sent him to private classes where he learned to read lips and pronounce words.

Later on, Adrian's parents decided to send him to a regular school. But the headmaster tried to prevent them from doing so, saying regular schools couldn't take care of a special-needs student. His parents were determined to take the risk and push him hard to go through his work every day because they want to prove that, given the opportunity, he could do anything. Adrian made the grade and got accepted. It was a big challenge. The pace was faster so he had to sit at the front of the class and really pay attention to the teacher, which wasn't always easy. But he stuck to it and did a lot of extra work after school.

The effort made by Adrian and his parents paid off. Adrian graduated with good grades and got into a top high school. He also achieved a lot in life outside school. He developed a love for the outdoors and went to Nepal to climb mountains. He even entered the World Yacht Race 05/06 — being the first hearing-impaired Asian to do so.

But none of these achievements would have been possible without one of the most important lessons from his mother. "If you believe in yourself and work hard, you can achieve great result," she often said.

Taller women may face a higher risk of many cancers than their shorter ones, according to a US study released Thursday.

Researchers looked at a sample(样本) of nearly 145,000 women aged 50 to 79 for the analysis published in the US Journal Cancer Epidemiology. They found that each additional 10 centimeters of height was linked to a 13 percent higher risk of getting cancer.

"Finally, cancer is a result of processes having to do with growth, so it makes sense that hormones(荷尔蒙) or other growth factors that influence height may also influence cancer risk," said lead author Geoffrey Kabat, senior epidemiologist(流行病学专家) at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine of Yeshiva University in New York.

After 12 years of following women who entered the study without cancer, researchers found links between greater height and higher possibility of developing cancers of the breast, colon(结肠), kidney(肾), thyroid(甲状腺), as well as multiple myeloma(骨髓瘤) and melanoma(黑色素瘤).

"We were surprised at the number of cancer sites that were positively associated with height. In this data set, more cancers are associated with height than were associated with body mass index(BMI 体重指数).” added Kabat.

Taller women even suffered a higher risk for some cancers, such as a 23 to 29 percent increase in the risk of developing cancers of the kidney, rectum, thyroid.

None of the 19 cancers studied showed a lower risk with greater height. The study did not establish a certain height level at which cancer risk begins to rise, and Kabat said it is important to remember that the increased risk researchers found was small.

“It needs to be kept in mind that factors such as age, smoking, body mass index, and certain other risk factors have considerably larger effects,” he said, “The association of height with a number of cancer sites suggests that exposures in early life, including nutrition, play a role in influencing a person’s risk of cancer.”

51. What do you know about the research?

- A. The participants are of the same age.
- B. They chose most middle-aged and elderly women.
- C. They found hormones are sure to cause cancer.
- D. The participants must be American natives.

52. According to Geoffrey Kabat we can know that _____.

- A. cancer has a bad effect on the physical growth
- B. obesity is more highly associated with cancer
- C. no women are aware of their unfavorable height
- D. so many kinds of cancer are linked to the height

53. What does the last paragraph imply?

- A. The lifestyle influences a person's health heavily.
- B. A poor habit will lead to a sudden growth.
- C. A person's life span depends on his height.
- D. Good nutrition can ensure your good health.

54. We can infer from the passage that _____.

- A. the tall women are sure to suffer from cancer
- B. many researchers disagree with Geoffrey Kabat
- C. more evidence should be found in future
- D. BMI is the main cause for 19 cancer sites

55. Which of the following is the title for the passage?

- A. Cancer is Related to the Factors of Growth
- B. Tall Women May Face Higher Cancer Risk
- C. Women Are Easily to Be Affected by Cancer
- D. Tall Women Are in Poorer Health than Short Ones
